

Continue the story...

It had been three years since my grandfather had passed away. We had hardly seen him during his final years. He had seemed more concerned with his crazy ideas about building a time-machine than spending time with his family. Today, we had plans to clear his loft. As I walked into his old, dusty workspace, at the top of the house, I instantly saw it. "There's no way this works!" I laughed to myself, but there was no harm in testing it out...
